hygiene, education, vocational skills and cooperatives, as well as environmental and cultural conservation. Her development work has reached the most disadvantaged children and families living in remote locations and under difficult living conditions without regard to race, sex, religion or nationality.

As an effective approach of children and youth development, Her Royal Highness's initiative has been expanding to improving the lives of children and youth living in neighboring countries. Through a school setting, a holistic and sustainable development has been implemented by teachers and the community with the joint support from key sectors like education, agriculture, health and local administrations. Children will be equipped with knowledge, skills and attitude for healthy life through a process called learning by doing. Community participation is also a key. Parents and other community members are encouraged to participate in school activities, in which knowledge can be transferred to families and communities.

At present, there are 95 participating schools in 10 countries - Lao People's Democratic Republic, The Republic of the Union of Myanmar, Kingdom of Cambodia, Socialist Republic of Vietnam, Mongolia, Kingdom of Bhutan, People's Republic of Bangladesh, Republic of Indonesia, the Democratic Republic of Timor-Leste and Republic of the Philippines.
