Greetings!

The UP Pre-Medical Society - Baguio is a duly-recognized academic and socio-civic organization, in the University of the Philippines Baguio that focuses on encouraging and achieving excellence by fostering academic and social growth locally and even beyond, while also being able to promote a wider understanding and awareness of societal issues that the country is facing.

On this account, the UP Pre-Medical Society - Baguio presents the fourth installment of MEDALLA, a national academic and public health conference consisting of different academic competitions and lecture series pooling the country's best minds. This event allows junior and senior high school students to showcase their social and cultural skills and promote public health awareness with the goal to enhance their skills in different ways. The conference would include competition and lecture series discussing different topics in relation to medicine and public health.

The term "MEDALLA" translates to "medal" in Ilocano, which symbolizes the award that is often given or awarded to winners for recognition. The UP-Pre-Medical strives to acknowledge and recognize the achievements and contributions of every participant, while maintaining honor and excellence in the face of ongoing crises.

Academic competitions include Public Health Opinion Writing, Science and Health Writing, Poster Making, Medical Trivia Quiz Bee, Impromptu Speech and the Science Investigatory Project. Additionally, we will also be conducting lecture series, with topics to be later announced on our official Facebook pages.
